Spend more than a century in schools, and you will learn a thing or two.

It all started with making learning environments more conducive to learning. Of course, back in 1905 the first need we met was on a very basic level: warmth. Our early heating systems provided a cleaner and more effective source of climate control for one-room schools and helped school kids concentrate on their lessons.

By 1920, we introduced sanitary water fountains and lavatory systems for rural schools. But that's still a long way from today and manufacturing "furniture for inspired learning" for the daycare/pre-kindergarten, education and college markets. How did we get here?

For the answer, just look back at our roots. We've always maintained a close connection with educators. This has always allowed us to better understand the dynamic nature of education. More than 50 years ago, it was the reason we entered the field of student desking.

Since then, we've become even more active in our approach by watching for emerging curricula, devising the furniture needed to make a curriculum succeed and creating the products to do the job. We followed that process in the 1970s when introducing our pioneering line of computer furniture.

Today, that line has grown one of the broadest available, giving educators more and better choices to meet their needs.

Listening to educators has prevented us from standing still. As with our computer furniture, our classroom and library furniture continue to improve. Our offerings in all these areas have both expanded and improved. In fact, we're in our third generation of cooperative learning furniture.

We're helping educators organize, store and distribute learning materials more effectively with our innovative Cascade™ Storage line.

And we're more conscious than ever of the role that design plays in creating the most engaging, stimulating learning environments. As long as education continues to innovate, our commitment is to never stop learning.

For more healthy, comfortable and inspiring learning environments.

Smith System is a manufacturer of innovative products that make educational environments more healthy, comfortable and inspiring for students and educators. The spirit of innovation is not confined to our products, rather it extends to the thinking, processes and materials we use to design, manufacture and even ship them. The feeling at our Plano, Texas manufacturing facility is, we don't just want to make the best school furniture, we want to make it the best way.

BETTER FUNCTION AND COMFORT.

It may be simplistic, but better furniture is made better. Ours starts with dedicated craftspeople. They have the kind of pride that was common when we started business in 1905, but is all too hard to find today. The difference is, now we have much more sophisticated tools, more consistent materials and better designs to work with. Today, even the old timers would envy our quality and efficiency.

In our 100+ years in schools, we've learned which materials can make furniture and accessories that stand up to the daily use in a classroom or elsewhere. High on our list are: high-pressure laminate, structural support systems and rugged edge moldings. Our craftsmen transform these high-quality materials with proven techniques, like the MIG welds on our chair legs, our legendary outside-hold glides that stay on, baked-on powder-coat surfaces and edge moldings stapled every 6"-8" and in corners.

COMMITTED TO HEALTHY INDOOR AIR QUALITY IN SCHOOLS.

Clean indoor air is a leading measure of a healthy learning environment. The key to indoor air quality is minimizing volatile organic compounds (VOCs) because prolonged exposure to them may increase the risk of childhood asthma. VOCs can be emitted by things commonly found in schools like cleaning agents, furnishings, paint, flooring and building products.

Recognizing the importance of clean indoor air, we've done our best to minimize the VOCs emitted Smith System products. Through careful engineering, stringent materials selection and sound manufacturing processes, we've succeeded in creating a line of furniture that schools can feel good about from a health standpoint. In fact, our entire line is UL GREENGUARD™ GOLD certified to meet indoor air quality standards for children and schools. We are the first school furniture manufacturer to earn this level of certification for our entire portfolio. Additionally, all Smith System products comply with CA 01350 and have met the new CREL standard for formaldehyde emissions level of 9 Qg/m³ (7.3 ppb) for three years. CARB2 COMPLIANT.

FOR HEALTHIER LIVING ENVIRONMENTS.

We're working to make our manufacturing processes as efficient as possible because efficiency reduces waste. We're reducing the environmental impact on the part of our vendors – we work closely with those in the supply chain to make sure they're doing their part to safeguard the environment when making goods from wood product, steel, and plastic. We're reducing waste. Recently, rather than sending 50,000 lbs. of plastic (from chair shells and edge moldings that didn't meet our quality standards) to the landfill, we had the material recycled for use by another manufacturer. And we're reducing packaging used by our vendors.

Meanwhile we're increasing the recyclability of products – most of our chairs are composed of polypropylene plastics and chromed steel and are 99% recyclable (glides and/or casters make up the remaining 1%). Booktrucks are also 99% recyclable. And we're increasing the use of recycled steel and renewable resources in our products.

Our products' exceptional quality, durability and longevity take on added value in an environmental context. The longer they stay in service, the longer they stay out of landfills. And, as long as they're in service, additional natural resources don't have to be used to replace them.
